

INTERNATIONAL Living Learning Community in the Oak Street Residence Hall

UMKC will be starting an International Living Learning Community (ILLC) in the fall of 2007. Living Learning Communities are housing arrangements in the Residential Hall for students with interests in a particular topic or subject---in this case, there will be students living together who share an interest in international relations, cultures, events, etc. This is a great opportunity to live with Americans and international students alike!

The International Living Learning Community will be housed in the new Oak Street Residential Hall. International students will have the opportunity to participate in a typical American college student experience (dorm living), while gaining valuable insight into American culture by frequent formal and informal interactions with American students. And, American students who are interested in international peoples and events will have the unique benefit of learning about your country from you.

Activities organized for this International Living Learning Community may include:

- Language tables or dinners
- Presentations about world cultures
- Faculty presentations about their international work
- Outings to community events which are international in nature
- Participation in International Education Week events
- Information sessions about how to plan an international education experience
- Volunteer opportunities
