JEN SALVO-EATON, M.L.I.S.
HEAD OF RESOURCE SHARING & GRADUATE STUDENT SERVICES, UMKC LIBRARIES
"I can handle anything, because of the connections and relationships I have made at Graduate Write-Ins. It took six years to find the perfect way for me to learn to write. In the end, it’s all about preparation, forethought, and follow-through."

What is the Graduate Writing Initiative (GWI)?

A response to a demonstrated need for cross-campus support for graduate-level writing.

The GWI guides, supports, and evaluates UMKC's resources and programs for graduate writers, and provides resources for faculty working with graduate students.
What we do

• Identify writing and research needs of graduate students
• Collaborate with graduate students, departments and offices across campus
• Provide resources and learning opportunities, with the goal of improving student understanding and mastery of writing
• Support writing through multiple channels and formats to accommodate various student needs
• Connect students with peers and mentors to build community
The GWI is...

• All volunteer, grassroots and self-driven

• Funded by the School of Graduate Studies

  • Funds for half-time Graduate Writing Specialist position
  • $5,000 annually for:
    ◦ supplies for Write Ins, workshops and writing groups
    ◦ writing consultant time for Write Ins
    ◦ marketing
    ◦ graduate workstations (e.g. software licensing costs and upkeep)
    ◦ offices supplies and expenses for Graduate Writing Specialist
    ◦ professional development

Why Provide Graduate Writing Support?

• Across academia, there's a "felt need" for graduate writing support
  • (Simpson, Caplan, Cox, & Phillips, 2016)

• Biggest roadblock? Often, writing the dissertation.
  • (Council of Grad Studies Ph.D. Completion Project, 2008)
What about at UMKC?

• At UMKC:
  • Graduate students feel underprepared and sometimes feel left to fend for themselves (2013 Survey)
  • Faculty request support for their students (2013 Survey)
  • Provost has expressed a need for stronger graduate programs (especially Master's programs)
  • Time-to-degree concerns
  • Writing is a transferable skill—employers in the Kansas City area request writing and communication skills
Our Impact: Workshops

Our Wish List

• Become more formalized within the university
• Hire more dedicated personnel (= funding) across campus
• Expand workshop offerings
• Offer credit-bearing courses
• Offer "Camp Completion"
• Hire more graduate consultants in the Writing Studio
• Train and implement writing group facilitators
• Expand and improve partnerships with departments
• Work with FaCET to support faculty in their mentorship of graduate writers
“[The GWI has] mostly reassured me that I can be a capable or competent student, whether it’s writing or a research task...knowing who the experts are and who I can turn to for help. And given that, that I’m not alone, with all my colleagues on campus. We certainly have the tools in place to be successful together.”
