Candidates for all baccalaureate degrees must take the UMKC RooWriter writing assessment before they have completed 90 credit hours. Incoming transfer students with more than 90 credit hours must take the RooWriter by the end of their first semester of enrollment. Students may take the RooWriter at any time while enrolled at UMKC as a personal diagnostic, but it will only satisfy the undergraduate graduation requirement after a student has completed Discourse II (or equivalent).

Certain Colleges, Schools, Departments, Majors, Writing Intensive courses, etc. may also require the RooWriter to be taken multiple times, and some might further require a certain minimal level of achievement be attained for advancement. The RooWriter supports and is supported by the University-wide General Education requirements.

The RooWriter is offered any time online. Students should visit the RooWriter website for contact information, writing improvement resources, and other general information.
